Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Manhattan Outfit That Arranges Group Houses Targets Dan's Papers

By Dan Rattiner

An Internet company that holds mixers in New York City to arrange for share house rentals in the Hamptons has begun organizing a boycott against Dan's Papers because of an editorial position we have taken against such a practice.

"I am so pissed!" the President of the company wrote. "My Vodka sponsor is considering advertising in Dan's Papers. Dan's Papers not only writes disparaging articles against New Yorkers who do share houses, they also include a form to fill-out (sic) so readers can report all Share Houses to the Police! They site (sic) a law that it's illegal to rent a house in the Hamptons to 5 or more unrelated people.

They are selectively discriminating against single people!... Let's boycott and stop spending money on Hamptons restaurants, bars, clubs, stores, products, real estate agents, companies, etc. who advertise in Dan's Papers. Dan's sells ads by saying that hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers read their paper while they write articles saying we should be fined and arrested. They are screwing us from behind without the courtesy of a reach-around. Email me if you're a (sic)

Ad buyer/Marketing/Brand Manager who wants to advertise in the Hamptons without using Dan's Papers..."

The Internet company engaging in these activities is Cassworld and Cassworld.com. The Web site, when I looked at it last Wednesday, featured,

New England downtowns, oceanfront mansions, fishing villages, private clubs, conservative traditions and, in one case, Southampton Village, even a dress code that requires modest apparel downtown. About 90% of the people in our community are raising children here or have family that come here in the summertime with children.

It may come as a surprise to some, but in this context, the town governments have laws designed to prevent homes in residential areas from being rented out to hordes of people, irrespective of marital status, who want to party all night to ear splitting music, destroy the house they live in, leave trash all around, get drunk and loud and, where necessary, pee in the street. The laws prohibiting these activities are made by Town

Supervisors and Village Mayors, not Dan's Papers, but to be honest, we favor them.

I might note that this situation is certainly not black and white. For as long as I can remember, responsible young professionals have shared group houses with one another in our communities. They do so quietly. And as with many things, they may sometimes violate town laws, but they are under the radar, so to speak. Nobody has any among other things, a picture of a hot looking lady in a wet T-shirt on a table waving her arms over her head. This was at an event called DRINKS AT REHAB. There was information about another event, scheduled for the next day, April 24, in Manhattan, for THE BACHELOR/ETTE AUCTION & PADLOCK & KEY PARTY. It would go on until 2 a.m.

Both the Hamptons and the North Fork are magnificent, 350-year-old communities with Old quarrel with this.

Periodically, however, the group rental situation gets out of hand. Twenty people rent a place. The round the clock parties begin.

In the 1970s, this happened in Amagansett. In the 1980s it got out of hand in Westhampton Beach. In both cases, our Mayors and Supervisors acted. In Amagansett, laws were passed limiting the number of unrelated people who could live in a house and the number of cars that could be parked in a residential driveway. In Westhampton Beach, where for awhile motorcycle gangs prowled Main Street, the powers that be ended it by making an extremely novel decision. They festooned downtown with flowers. The motorcycle gangs scratched their heads, made guttural sounds and went west, off to the Jersey Shore or somewhere.

In this decade, the problem has surfaced in and around East Quogue and Hampton Bays. The Town Supervisor has received countless complaints from both summer people and local people. The newspapers, including Dan's Papers, have received numerous letters to the editors. Some houses were being rented out to as many as 30 different people. This went way across the line. There were cases in Hampton Bays where families, asleep at night, have been awakened by partygoers so drunk they had no idea they had wandered into these people's living room. A week later, another neighbor, taking the cue and locking his doors at night, found that the party had spilled over into his rear yard patio. At one bar in Hampton Bays, the Boardy Barn, the police department reportedly set up in the parking lot a virtual precinct annex to deal with the drunks. They would come Friday at midnight and be there until Sunday. They did this virtually every weekend of last summer.

As a result of all of this, Supervisor Skip Heaney of Southampton took action. Late last summer, he announced that the activities that create out of control summer rental situations be monitored. His people would, in the winter and the spring, look for web sites and classified ads where brokers would be putting together group house rentals. He asked that people call in to his office the worst offenders. We supported that effort. And many people did send in addresses of such houses.

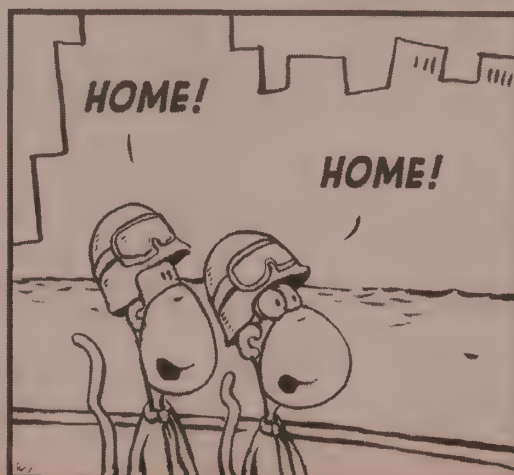

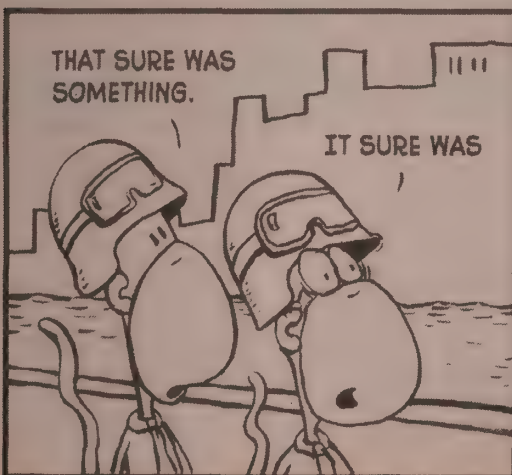

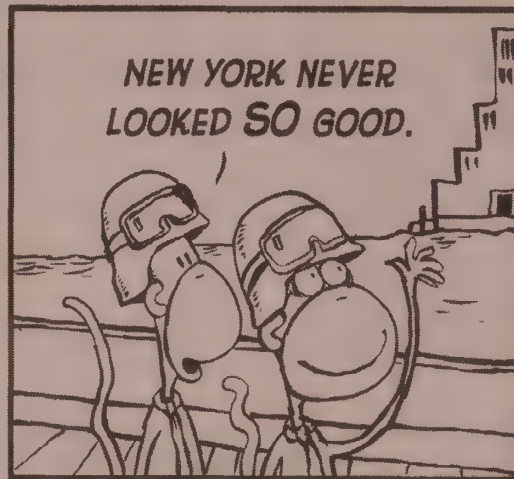

Then this past winter, Supervisor Heaney and the Town Board took more aggressive action. Noting that renting out to 30 people could make a broker or landlord a very tidy profit, sometimes into the six figures, and further noting that the

Two 70,000 Fan Rock Concerts Are Coming To Riverhead This Summer

By Dan Rattiner

I have just had a conversation with Rick Farman, the promoter of the second Woodstock-style concert that will be held in Riverhead this summer. If you haven't heard, there will be a first concert, lasting two nights and three days, on June 7 and 8, and there will be a second concert, lasting three nights and four days, from August 8 to 10. Both events are taking place in Calverton, on the 100-acre site of the former Grumman aerospace facility, which is now being redeveloped and called Enterprise Park, about seven miles west of downtown Riverhead. Both concerts will feature between 30 and 60 bands, be attended by around 70,000 people, and both will open their gates for the concertgoers on Thursday night, the day before the Friday when the music begins. Thus the three nights and four days for the second concert and two nights and three days for the first concert.

Farman told me that the concert he is promoting, the second one, will have tickets on sale for between $150 and $180 each, thereby bringing in about $10 or $11 million. The tickets are for the whole four days. His company, Superfly Productions, is renting the site for $150,000. He has nothing to do with the first concert, which is being promoted by a asked.

"We think this will appeal to young professionals," he said. "Our demographic should be young men and women between college age and thirty-five. They will come from all over the country, but mostly from the Northeast between Virginia and New Hampshire, and they will camp on the site."

"Who will be performing at the concert?"

"We expect about thirty bands. Heading them up will be The Dead, Dave Matthews and Tim Reynolds, Bob Dylan and Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers. There will be four stages for the performers and the music will be pretty much continuous each day from early afternoon until the wee hours of the morning. We want no trouble. Absolutely none of the bands will be performing what is known as aggressive music. We will be selling a maximum of 75,000 tickets, which will be good for the whole four days. It is a secured site, surrounded by a barbed wire fence. Nobody will be allowed in without a ticket."

"What will the facilities be for the campers inside the site?"

The Royal Courtesy Mounted Patrol

group called Field Day, headed up by Andrew Dreskin. But he could answer any questions about the second concert.

"Who will be coming to this concert?" I

"There is no plumbing but there will be a water truck making rounds. There will be Port-a-Potties. There will not be showers. Fires will not be permitted, but small charcoal fires in grills will be allowed. You can bring in your own food and drink, or you can buy it from the concessions. Tents, trailers and RVs will be set up in rows on the two concrete runways at the site. Drainage is good and so no matter what, even if we have rain, the show will go on."

"Describe the show."

"Besides the music, there will be all sorts of other attractions. We intend to bring in an arcade of 50 games, mostly older games, Pacman and so forth. There will be a movie tent. We'll show 'The Simpsons,' or films about the bands that are performing. Maybe sports attractions. We should have a cyber cafe, lots of food, crafters, beer and soft drink stands and so forth."

"What about security?"

"Security will be provided by a firm that has done many rock concerts. It consists of horses and riders and is known as the Alpha and Omega, Royal Courtesy Mounted Patrol. It provides uniformed, high visibility, weaponless security. We held a concert about this size in Tennessee last year and we used this firm. There will be several hundred security people, around 80 horses."

"How about outside the barbed-wire fence?"

"We've been meeting with the state police and local police, the fire departments and the health department. Also the DOT. There were some delays at the concert we did last year in Tennessee on the highways, but we think we have learned from that. We had 30 ticket booths set up at that concert. Here we should have twice that number. And we have four exits on the Long Island Expressway that can lead to the site, exits 70 through 73. If one backs up, we use another. Thousands of people, many of them volunteers, are involved in a concert and camping experience of this size."

"You have said the concert should benefit the community."

"We think the one in Tennessee benefited the community to the tune of $7 million. Here, we are going to need laborers for the site to clean up after it is over, we're going to be renting many, many portable bathrooms. We'll need lumber to build the stages. We'll be renting hotel rooms — maybe 500 of them. I guarantee you every gas station and every deli around this site will benefit from this concert."

"People came to the concert in Tennessee from every corner of the compass," I said. "Here you have a narrow island and just one road leading out. It's a summer weekend. How do you expect people to get out to the Hamptons, the North Fork and Montauk?"

"The DOT is very confident this can all be handled. You should look at our website and our Tennessee concert results. Our concert was so well done that Pollstar magazine, the trade magazine for the concert industry, gave us an award. Spin magazine voted us Festival of the Year. You also ought to look at the Web site for the mounted security firm. Also, the people who own the site in Tennessee have contracted us to do the event again this year. You can't get a better recommendation than that."

Men Catching Up

Men Are Gaining In The "Who Lives The Longest" Contest In New York

By Dan Rattiner

It has always bothered me that women live longer than men. Why is that? Is this fair? The difference is quite amazing and, at last look in 1990, was almost ten years for those living in New York City. In other words, if you took two people who were born around 1920 who live out their natural lives, the man would have died in 1994 while the woman would still be going. She'd have seen the collapse of the Soviet Union, the resurgence of the New York Yankees, Tiger Woods, the building of the Space Station, the dethronement of Mike Tyson, the rise of Alexandr Putin, the defeat of Al Gore, "Who Wants To Marry A Millionaire," "Survivor," the terrorist attack on the Twin Towers, and the War in Iraq. She'd also have been able to go to the Broadway show The Producers. Us men would have missed all that.

We take all this for granted, of course. It's just the way things are. I can tell you this. If the situation were reversed, none of it would be taken for granted. Women would fight for their rights to improved medical care and would not cease until

They put things off they should be taking care of. They go to the doctor who says hmmm, why didn't you see me six months ago? It's too late now. You never hear of a woman who does that.

It's a male thing. We refuse to ask directions, are oblivious to whatever women are telling us, we get into fights, get arrested, get drunk, belch...

Maybe it's a male thing. We refuse to ask directions, are oblivious to whatever women are telling us, we get into fights, get arrested, get drunk, belch, and fart. Then, having not gone to a doctor ever, one day we just keel over. The women in our lives, noting that we seemed to have died before our time, say he was never sick a day in his life, which is actually not true. What they really should be saying is he never went to a doctor a day in his life.

their longevity numbers were the same.

Maybe that is why women live longer today.

Actually, I think it is. Doctors say there is no reason at all for women to live longer than men. If men took care of themselves it would all equal out. But men do not take care of themselves.

Now, however, there seems to be some good news for men in the longevity wars. From 1980 to 1990, the life span difference between men and women in New York City INCREASED from 7.9 years to 9.7 years. This was just the continuation

May I Help You?

Give An Over-The-Phone Hug To Telephone Operators Everywhere

By Dan Rattiner

If you want to do some good in the world, talk to the people who man the telephones.

My mother was telling me about a recent conversation she had with an operator.

"I was making my reservations on Delta to fly from Fort Lauderdale to New York for Passover," she told me, "and you know how you have no idea where these people are? They could be in Ottawa. Or Salt Lake City. You don't know.

"Anyway, I was telling the reservations lady about the brisket I make every Passover in Florida that I take on the plane. The Delta lady was curious about that. 'I didn't know they let you take cooked things in the cabin,' she said. I told her I did this every year. My kids love my brisket. So she asked me for the recipe.

"I don't cook," she told me, "but my husband does." So I gave it to her and she wrote it down. Then she asked would I mind giving her my telephone number. 'Just in case he gets into trouble,' is how she put it. So I did."

I told her about a conversation I had recently with an operator. I was trying to get the telephone number for a dorm at the Berklee College of Music in Boston. My son had lost his cell phone again. It had been so long since I used his dorm number that I had forgotten it.

In the course of things, we got to talking about kids and money. My kids are in college, I told her, and I send them a weekly allowance for incidentals. Her kids are much younger. They get their money, she said, by rifling for change in her husband's pants pockets every evening after he takes them off to go to bed. He leaves his pants over a chair so they can find the coins.

ways broke, as you know, at that age."

"I hadn't thought of that," she said.

It's tough manning a telephone all day. The people who handle directory assistance, the people who handle hotlines, the people who handle complaints or reservations or telephone orders all have a very difficult job to do, taking one phone call after another. Of course, I have no compassion at all for people who cold call you to sell you things. They should be damned to hell, bothering you when you least want it. They should get real jobs.

But think of those poor souls, sitting in rooms lit by fluorescent lights, talking on the telephone all day greasing the wheels of the world, while outside there are people going surfing, people teaching horseback riding, people going giving sailing lessons. No wonder those people on the telephones have to be monitored all the time — as in, YOUR TELEPHONE CALL MAY BE MONITORED FOR TRAINING PURPOSES. How would you like your boss looking over your shoulder all day? Give these people a break.

Not long ago, I heard that Microsoft opera-

How Fast Do You Have To Go To Outrun The Local Police?

THE SUNRISE HIGHWAY EXTENDS TO MONTAUK AND SOLVES ITS OWN PROBLEM

By Dan Rattiner

How fast do you have to go to outrun a police car on eastern Long Island? Depends on what kind of road you are talking about.

A couple of years ago, the police in Greenport chased a motorist heading up Route 25, a two lane road, at 95 miles an hour and could not keep up with him. This was at three o'clock in the morning.

What had happened was this. Around two forty five, an alarm had gone off in a liquor store in town. A police officer, patrolling nearby, heard it and drove over, only to find a man leaping into a Ford Taurus out front and roaring away. The officer gave chase, and as the motorist got on Route 25, a two-lane highway, and headed east toward Greenport, he clocked him at 95. He tried to keep up but couldn't. So he pulled over and called for backup.

Pretty soon, more police cars appeared there at the eastern edge of the village. They all pulled over where the first officer was and discussed the matter. Route 25 goes eight miles to a dead end. It's the only road going out to Orient. They figured the motorist would get to the dead end in about seven minutes, turn around and come back.

Sure enough, that is exactly what happened. Just 12 minutes later, the motorist returned, still driving at high speed, but when confronted by a five police car roadblock, hit the brakes and came to a halt.

They charged him with reckless driving, speeding, and being in possession of stolen liquor. Later they charged him with burglary. As far as I know, he is still in jail.

Speeding on the Long Island Expressway is another matter. You have to go more than 110. How we know this is because of an event that happened on the Expressway around three weeks ago, on April 17.

At 9:37 in the morning of that day, a Thursday, Suffolk Highway Patrol clocked a motorist going eastbound at that speed just past Exit 66, which is eleven miles west of Riverhead. Traffic was heavy at that hour. He was weaving in and out. The vehicle was a late model black Volvo.

These officers at Exit 66 gave chase, but could not keep up, so they radioed ahead to State Police officers at Exit 68. Officers there shortly thereafter spotted this motorist coming at high speed, also gave chase, but also could not keep up with him.

Around an hour later, this exact same car was spotted at Route 71, just three miles east of wagon. They were able to pull the motorist over and apprehend him.

Among other things the officers were able to find in this black Volvo on the side of the road were two traffic tickets from a month earlier, made out to this very same motorist, Boris Rimsky, of Flushing, Queens. They were for minor violations — talking on the cell phone while driving and driving without a seat belt. Both tickets were answerable in at the Riverhead courthouse on April 16, the day before all the speeding happened.

Rimsky gave this account. He had woken up that morning realizing he had failed to mail his tickets in on time. He wanted to get them resolved, so he figured if he drove there before noon, when the ticket said the Judge would be there, he could resolve the matter. But he had never been to Riverhead. So he thought he better get there early and get there fast. He had indeed resolved the matter and was on his way home when they had pulled him over.

Police gave him new tickets, for reckless driving, failure to signal a lane change, driving on the shoulder of the road, and three speeding tickets, one each from three different locations at three different times between Exit 68 and Exit 71. The tickets at these different locations were for 100 miles an hour, in excess of 110 miles an hour and 75 miles an hour.

He spent the night in jail at the Sixth Precinct in Coram and in the morning, was arraigned and his family posted $500 bail and they let him out. Police advised to have family members drive him to court to answer these new tickets rather than risk driving to court himself.

Riverhead, but heading west. The motorist was not driving at impossible speeds. He was clocked at 75 miles an hour and two robbery squad detectives and a deputy sheriff in an unmarked car took after him. Also joining the chase was another Suffolk County Highway Patrol officer in his own personal car, which happens to be a station

ELAINE STEINBECK 1914-2003

Of all the wonderful people in the Hamptons few could compare with Elaine Steinbeck. Elaine's style, Southern grace, and warmth could fill a room. It is rare to hear someone say the words, "I love you with all my heart and soul". If I ask people who those words remind them of the answer is clear: Elaine Steinbeck! To be able to say those words and mean them requires a warm being and unselfish heart.

Elaine Anderson Steinbeck was widowed in 1968. She was the widow of Noble Laureate and Pulitzer Prize winner, John Steinbeck. The couple resided in NYC and on Bluff Rd in the Bay Point section of Sag Harbor. They married each other in 1950. Elaine was John Steinbeck's third wife and John was Elaine's second husband. In 1952 John Steinbeck published "East of Eden". In 1953 the couple started renting in Sag Harbor and bought their house here in 1955. Surrounded by water on three sides the house reminded John of his early life in Salinas, Calif. John is buried in Salinas and plans include that Elaine will be buried by his side there.

Elaine Steinbeck's personal accomplishments were many. She was one of the first women to work as a Broadway stage manager while working on the Roger's and Hammerstein production of "Oklahoma". She was personal assistant for Theater Guild founder Lawrence Langer. She was always surrounded by playwrights and theater people. Her closest friends included Edward Albee, Lanford Wilson, Joe Pintauro, Anthony Harvey, Terence McNally, Frank Loesser, Eli Wallach, Ann Jackson, Adolph Green, Betty Comden, Sidney Lumet. The list goes on and on and sounds like a Who's Who of the theater world. Elaine was actively involved with Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor. She has asked that donations be made to the theater in her name. The stage at Bay Street is named after Elaine.

Elaine Steinbeck died in New York Hospital this past Sunday. She was eighty-eight.

As recently as a few summers ago, Elaine drove herself to the Elaine Benson Gallery and we laughed about her always calling herself Elaine #2. She and my mother Elaine Benson (Elaine #1) were longtime friends. They started

Give Darkness A Chance

East Hampton Dark Sky Society Tries to Bring Back the Night Sky

By Jerry Cimisi

The last time we talked to Susan Harder of the Long Island Chapter of the Dark Sky Society, she was hopeful there would be a lighting change in East Hampton on Main Street there where she lives. "The problem was," she said, "in a lot of the towns and villages the emphasis was on historical lighting fixtures, not keeping in mind that these fixtures were designed for candles or gas and so gave off much less light than electricity."

As the name implies, the Dark Sky Society is about combating what is called "light pollution": returning more darkness to the night. "No one is talking about having no lights, but lighting that is more focused, less glaring, and does not throw light upward into the night."

From astronomers to typical homeowners, more people are becoming worried — and annoyed — about the glare of populated areas. Nighttime satellite photos show an almost continuous blotch of light in the northeastern U.S. Where once you could distinguish between Boston and New York and Washington, now the great suburbs between those cities are themselves huge producers of nighttime illumination.

It is a glare that can be reduced by simple measures.

"It's a very manageable problem," Ms. Harder stressed. "It's not like, say, nuclear waste. I think the biggest problem is a lot of people feel there were places where it was hard to see the road and traffic because of the glare and that directly contributed to a pedestrian getting killed."

When Susan Harder talks about nonglare lighting she is referring to what is called fully shielded or full cutoff light fixtures in which the bulb cannot be seen. "It is behind a shield that itself has reflectors that focus the light, so that it goes exactly where you need it."

On the opposite end of the scale is the sort of commercial lighting that you can get from LIPA at around $29 a month: "Huge floodlights that are called turnpike lights and are used for highways and railroad yards and yet you have small businesses using them, churches, restaurants, farm stands; they're lit up like movie sets. These 'turnpike' lights are throwing light for a greater distance and over a larger area than is needed. And they are on all night. You can't turn them off."

She added, "You can buy much more effective lighting fixtures for around fifty dollars, nonglare fixtures that will cost less than that

"These 'turnpike' lights are throwing light for a greater distance and over a larger area than is needed. And they are on all night. You can't turn them off."

---

they are the only ones that are bothered by excess lighting — they don't know that other people and towns are actually doing something about it."

She went on, "Last summer East Hampton converted the heads of its street lights. Now there is no glare at all, and very little sky glow. Before, despite all the apparent illumination, per year to operate, so you'd be saving a lot more than if you were renting those garish lights from LIPA."

Susan Harder, who came to East Hampton from Manhattan (where certainly there is more than a little light pollution) got into this crusade of sorts for very immediate and perhaps prosaic reasons. "I had two neighbors whose light shone right into my house. Like a lot of people I was bothered by this sort of thing." But unlike a lot of people, Ms. Harder thought there was something that could be done about the matter. "The problem at the time was that although there were in fact laws on the books about intrusive lighting — the laws in East Hampton already said that the direct source of light could not be visible across property lines — but the laws were not easy to enforce."

She said that Riverhead recently mandated that lighting in any new construction in town had to have any bulbs over 40 watts fully shielded.

"The fact is, there is really no opposition to this. Everyone likes lighting and everyone likes nonglare lighting. I was at an Earth Day celebration today and I gave one of these fully shielded fixtures to the East Hampton supervisor Jay Schneiderman, who is absolutely supportive of what we are trying to do. He said he is going to put the fixture right over his door. Right now we are trying to get better lighting in Montauk; the Concerned Citizens of Montauk are behind us. A change in lighting there would have to come out of the East Hampton Town budget: Mr. Schneiderman said he hoped the town would be able to do that next year. And he has, of all things, asked Ms. Harder to write the draft of a new law.

"The towns are putting their money where their mouth is. Awareness of this problem has gone from zero to sixty in a short time. Of course, the towns might have certain laws, but the state and the county could have laws less favorable to lighting. Though I was very encouraged to find that Bernadette Castro, The New York State Commissioner of Parks, had sent the East Hampton Dark Sky Society the plan for new lighting at Hither Hills, wanting our input on it. As it turned out, that lighting was the absolute worst that could be chosen; so here we have a chance to correct it before it's put into place."

Incidentally, Susan Harder is the founder of the Long Island Chapter of the Dark Sky Society, but she calls herself no more than a member. "I don't like hierarchy," she said.

She went on: "The funny thing is, we really don't have any great lighting to point to in the Hamptons. Though the new lighting by the King Kullen and the Library in Hampton Bays is fantastic. The most perfect lighting I've ever seen."

She related how the issue of light pollution was a recent subject on, of all shows, "The Simpsons." "I was told about it — or maybe the penalties for violating the laws were very low, they raised the penalties. This summer, group houses violating the laws would be subject to fines of $1,000 for each day that they remain in violation.

Then last week, Heaney took even further action. The liquor licenses and practices of 32 clubs and bars in the Town would be examined and the establishments forced to toe the line or close. Maximum occupancy laws would be enforced. Noise ordinances would be enforced. As those in the liquor industry say, there is such a thing as responsible drinking. The town would insist upon it. They will move to shut down those establishments that will not enforce responsible drinking.

Also last week, East Hampton passed a new law about group renting. In that town, a sleeping area for each person in residence has to exceed 75 square feet if there is just one person in the house, and 100 square feet for every two people in the house. In other words, a 10' x 10' bedroom sleeps two. Single, married, two in a bed, one in each of two beds, one in a bed and one on the floor, whatever.

I think advertisers and potential advertisers need to make a choice between Dan's Papers and Cassworld. Cassworld, in their call to a boycott, quotes Dan's Papers liberally. They apparently know our position. We have long noted, in the past, that we love fun as much as anybody, we support it, we go to bars, we have in our newspaper the largest nightlife section on the east end, and we only oppose this nonsense when it gets out of hand, which it has.

In spite of this, Cassworld apparently wants advertisers to squeeze us until we submit — until we change our editorials to support what they have in mind. We should cease screwing them up the behind. We should offer instead a reach around, as they so delicately put it. Offer those drunks in your living room drinks until they are unconscious if you want peace and quiet. Carry them snoring into the guestroom.

We propose a larger boycott. Cassworld and their friends should boycott not only Dan's Papers but the towns of East Hampton and Southampton, the Villages of Westhampton Beach, South and East Hampton and Sag Harbor, and the communities of Hampton Bays, Montauk, Amagansett and the North Fork.

Go somewhere else, guys.

Two days after the announcement of the boycott of Dan's Papers, which occurred after we closed last week's newspaper, there appeared a

Breaking News

Hopping House Deal Is Done

The Town of Southampton has successfully completed negotiations for the purchase of the Hopping property at the corner of Ocean Road and Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. The $3,050,000 purchase price was achieved with $550,000 of private funds, which were raised through the efforts of Town Councilman Dennis Suskind, in addition to $2.5 million from the Community Preservation Fund.

The Greek Revival-style house was built in 1840 for whaling captain James Hunting who lived in the house before the Hopping family acquired it in the late 1800's. For many years, the Hopping family ran a hotel and boarding house that was well known for its good food and hospitality.

The Bridgehampton Historical Society will consult in the restoration of the property. Included in the future of the space is a hamlet green and accessory parking.

It should be a great spot to stop on an afternoon walk and it's always nice to see people in the community who care enough to spend their own money on projects that will make this place more beautiful.

Children's Museum Is Good To Go

The salamanders' safety has been addressed and the Children's Museum of the East End has received permission from the New York State Department of Conservation to proceed with their 13,000-square foot project on the Sag Turnpike in Bridgehampton.

The museum was put on hold in 2001 when it was discovered that the proposed site was home to endangered tiger salamanders. In the interest of protecting the salamanders, fences with aluminum flashing at the bottom and buckets every few yards have been placed in the ground so that the salamanders will not be able to pass into the construction zone. The buckets will be checked each day by a wildlife officer and any salamanders will be given safe passage to the pond on the property.

Adrienne Kitaeff, executive director of the museum, hopes that they will be able to break ground in the spring or early summer of 2004 and complete construction by the late fall.

Duke Property

Suffolk County lawmakers are contemplating partnering with the Town of East Hampton to purchase the 57-acre Duke property on Three Mile Harbor in East Hampton. The property, which has 3,000 feet of waterfront on Hands Creek and the harbor carries a $12 million price tag, but it has long been near the top of the wish list of properties that the Town of East Hampton wants to preserve.

Anthony Drexel Duke has owned the property for over forty years and he started Boys & Girls Harbor, which benefits underprivileged inner-city kids, on an adjoining property. Duke began negotiating the sale of the property several years ago and submitted plans for a 12-lot subdivision and a 16-lot subdivision. The town decided to take action when these plans were submitted.

I went to the site bonnaroo.com, which is the festival site. The Tennessee concert, which took place halfway between Nashville and Chattanooga, about an hour from each, resulted in no serious fights or injuries. With 70,000 people, however, there were problems. Police arrested 18 on charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct or possession of marijuana. 39 people were taken to local hospitals and treated for drug overdoses, gastritis and dehydration. Some had surgical procedures done. Participants had a great time, but described waits of up to 12 hours to get in. The newspaper The Tennessean wrote of a traffic jam 20 miles long on the superhighway that comes nearest to the site. USA Today ran an article about it that included this statement from a participant, Joe Serpente, 34, of Chattanooga.

"You can be smoking a bowl in the beer line and they don't care about it as long as you're well behaved."

I went to the site mountedpatrol.com, which featured a stunningly wonderful photograph of security troops on horseback marching proudly through an event carrying American flags. With their red uniforms and cowboy hats, they looked like the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Many of their employees are ex-police officers, the copy read. They provided security at the World Cup and at Woodstock '95.

Farman told me a bit about his background. He was born and raised in Hewlett, Long Island, and went off to college in New Orleans. He got into the promotion business seven years ago when, during the New Orleans Jazz Festival, he heard a band he liked and went to see their publicist to tell them he would do anything to help them. He handed out leaflets, put up posters. Soon afterwards, the publicist stopped representing this band. After that, Farman and the publicist went into business together, putting together rock band performances in bars in New Orleans to complement the offerings of the Jazz Festival. Then he did the event in Tennessee. Now he is here. Farman is 30 years old.

word is warned; and I thought, Oh boy, how are they going to handle this? But I was very pleasantly surprised. Lisa decides to be an astronomer. Homer buys her a telescope. But she can't see the stars near the horizon. An astronomer tells her that's because there is just too much manmade light. So Lisa goes to the mayor, complains, and he orders all the lights turned off. But when that happens, her brother and his friends steal hood ornaments all over town. The people complain. The lights go back on, twenty-four hours a day, with the glare of noon. Lisa has her father, who works at the nuclear power plant, turn off all the power. The hood ornaments are being stolen again, but just when the people start to complain, there is a meteor shower and everybody in town watches it with awe. The show actually finished on a spiritual level, with everyone looking up at the sky. It was quite something."

The return of a star-rich sky would indeed be a gift to everyone. As a child growing up in Queens, I marveled at the countless (if artificial) stars I could see in the dome of the planetarium in the city, as compared to the scattering of only the brightest stars over my backyard. Moving to the East End, the sky, the real sky, was strewn with stars. I might have been Galileo looking through a telescope for the first time. But, with the years, as more houses were built for an increasing population, there were fewer places to see a star-rich sky. Perhaps, soon, there will be more.

In mid-April, there was National Dark Sky Week. It was an idea proposed by high school student Jennifer Barlow in Virginia. Susan Harder said, "It's not that we had everyone's lights off all night, but slowly there is coming to more people the idea that the night sky, the natural night sky is something they want."

She envisions, among the usual Hamptons get-togethers, star parties, where astronomers might show the uninitiated the wonders of the night sky. For thousands of years the eyes of humankind knew these sights. They may yet return to us, even if in scattered oases of darkness.

front page lead article in The New York Times ESCAPES section entitled IS THE PARTY OVER FOR SUMMER SHARES IN THE HAMPTONS? This was last Friday. You might want to read it on the Internet. There's an interesting section about how the police were called out to deal with an estimated 3,000 people jammed onto a dead end residential street in East Quogue on the Fourth of July to attend a party at somebody's home and watch some fireworks being set off there. They were being charged $15 a head admission.

The cops closed off the street with barricades and started issuing summonses and executing search warrants. Among the lesser infractions — operating a business (the $15 admission) on residential premises.

Peter Stone 1930-2003

Peter Stone, who won an Oscar, an Emmy and three Tony awards and wrote the musicals 1776 and Titanic and the film classic Charade, died on Saturday at the age of 73. He had a home in Amagansett and Manhattan and was a well-known and well-loved East End resident.

Mr. Stone won his Oscar in 1964 for the screenplay of the comedy Father Goose, which starred Cary Grant. He received an Emmy for the '60s television drama "The Defenders," but he was best known for his adaptations. Among his numerous projects he adapted the musical Sweet Charity for film and Billy Wilder's "Some Like It Hot" for Broadway as a musical.

"You listen to the audience," he said in a 1997 interview with the Associated Press about writing musicals. "The audience is wrong individually and always right collectively. If they don't laugh, it isn't funny. If they cough it isn't interesting. If they walk out, you are in trouble."

He is survived by his wife, Mary and his brother David.

You?

tors had all inquiries funneled to a small city in Ireland for disposition. The Irish have a very high aptitude for complex software solutions for some reason. And the going rate per hour is less than here.

"Before we start, where are ye from in Ireland?" might be an appropriate approach to a Microsoft problem.

Most of us have relatives, or people we know, living not far from wherever the operators are.

"I have a friend in San Antonio. Jerry Knickerson. You know him?"

"That bastard from King Palm Court?"

"The very one."

"You don't want to know."

It's an ice breaker.

Some companies have a rule that the people who man the phones are not supposed to tell you where they are. Break the rule.

"It's crazy they won't let you tell anybody where you are. I'm in East Hampton, New York. What are you, a prisoner of the company? Shame on them."

"Okay. Salt Lake City."

"Dated a hot number from there once." And so forth and so on.

Some years ago, there was a computer company, Acer, which had its software assistance operation in San Jose, Costa Rica. At least that is what was said.

"How come you don't have a Spanish accent?" I asked one technician.

"I'm from the main office," was the reply.

Turned out they were all from the main office, which was in San Jose, California.

They just LIKED the idea of putting out to the public that they were in Costa Rica. I read about it in a computer magazine. They had the Costa Rica weather reports. They had a list of the different kinds of snakes and spiders you find there. They had the names of the government officials. It was their big hoax on America and management let them do it because it kept morale up. Also, I think, it was just really cool.

Everyone who works a telephone all day should have their morale kept up. We should all make a pledge. Meet and make friends with one person every day who mans a telephone. Tell them about your kids. Give them recipes. Find out what sports they play or like to watch. Nothing but good will come of it. • of a trend. Forty years ago, that difference was just 4.2 years. It had been getting worse. But now, in the last ten years, the life span difference between men and women has for the first time DECREASED. It has dropped from 9.7 to just 5.7 years.

(JUST 5.7 years? That means no Jason Kidd, no George W., no Eminem, no "The Sopranos," grumble, grumble, grumble.)

Why has this happened? Everybody's got some explanation for it. What I think is that men have decided that enough is enough. 9.3 years, finally, was just out of the question. We've HAD it. We are making a conscious and determined effort to live longer, keep breathing, take long walks, keep breathing, eat fewer cheeseburgers, keep breathing. And you know we men can do whatever we set our minds to. There isn't a ketchup bottle top in America that does not know this fact.

There are two other points to be made with the publishing of these new statistics. For one thing, the average life span of both men and women keeps going up and up. Men in New York now live to be almost 75. Women live on average to 80. Also, New Yorkers are now, for the first time since 1940, living longer lives than the national average.

It's now a healthier thing to be living in New York City than in most other places.

It's not healthier living in New York City than in the Hamptons, however, although I have no statistics to prove this. But we've got the healthy salt sea air, wonderful fresh things to eat and drink from the land and the sea, a less stressful lifestyle, a glorious history going back almost four hundred years that is still standing on the Main Streets of our old New England towns, and some of the most beautiful landscapes in the world. Also, pure drinking water.

I figure men live around here to 85, women top out at 88. Just a guess. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #246 Who Do the Dipper Do That You Do So Well?

One of the noblest and oldest institutions on Shelter Island is Jack's Marina. Two years ago Jack's burned down and the second generation owners Michael and Camille Anglin, were forced to house this nautical store in temporary buildings further up on the island. But they're out of the bunker and back in their remodeled store and they are hitting the ground running! All of May is their Grand Opening!

I spoke with Camille to get the skinny and it's terrific. First off, there will be 400 giveaways! A hundred giveaways in tackle, the rest in toys! They plan to have a bucket filled with those little black photo cannisters and in each cannister is a note stating what you won!

If you're new to the island, you're wondering why a marina is giving away toys. It's because Jack's is half excellent marina and half best toy store in America. You see, Michael is a mariner and he runs the boat stuff and Camille is an educator and believes in the power of creative play to build problem solving skills, socialization skills (and all the other important stuff) and last, but not least, to have pure fun.

Can you remember sitting on the curb on a sunny day with your best friend and playing with the Chinese finger grabber toy and giggling yourself silly? Can you remember seeing just how high a Superball could bounce in a parking lot? Was there anything better than wiggling your toes in warm sand as you sat down to relish reading the latest Spiderman comic? We remember the simple joys of childhood all our lives.

I applaud Camille for never capitulating to sell Power Rangers, Pokemon or the latest rage, Yu Gi Oh. These are all just money-makers for Japan. They create these awful cartoons, (like "Pokemon," which is about kids who enslave creatures and then force them to battle to the death like gladiators) then sell characters toys and stuff to us through Toy R Us. Camille only sells what she has personally reviewed and found worthy. I have never been disappointed with any toy I bought there even if I had to share it with my thankless children who take my money and pick the crumbs off the Entenmanns crumb cake without seeming to open the box.

Camille is very jazzed about a new toy called Zoogy Balls. The name got me very excited, but she said it wasn't exactly that kind of toy and there wasn't actually any guy named Zoogy involved — okay, so I guess no new toys for me. Zoogy Balls are a kid's toy based on the Chinese finger pulls, it moves a ball away and back somehow, it's colorful, fun and simple. She also loves Luna Sticks, a balancing toy, and she is really crazy for her Dipper Do's. I don't know what the Dipper Do do, but it do it better than the average Dipper does.

As great as all the toy giveaways are, what I am really thrilled about is a hundred free tackles. One or two free tackles would keep me happy for the rest of the year, a hundred would probably kill me. And since the marina can service you from the back dock now, you can get your free tackle right on the water just like a duck. I can't wait!

I think Michael and Camille should paint the sidewalk in front of their store in a yellow brick pattern, because it really is like Oz in there, complete with lotsa little people, Camille the Good Witch of the Sea and Michael, the all knowing Dock Wizard. So if you come to the island, please stop and see Jack's Marina, it's worth the parking hassle — is there a better recommendation than that? I am planning to bring them the broomstick of the Wicked Witch of the West to see what I can get for it.

The East End has a great many concerts and festivals. Up until now, they have all been rather upscale and low key. We have the jazz festival in Riverhead, the strawberry festival in Mattituck, the classical music festival in Bridgehampton and the Hampton Classic Horse Show, also in Bridgehampton. We have the wine harvest festival on the North Fork, several shark tournaments in Montauk, also a series of polo matches in a field in Bridgehampton, and several tennis tournaments, which raise money for charity. None of these events have any more than 9,000 people on the premises at any one time.

What we have here, it seems to me, is a hell of a big bash for the benefit of people ages 18 to 35 from all over. It seems like it will be a very good time for all who attend. It will be very large. Inside the barbed wire fence, these promoters, this promoter anyway, will probably do a good job in letting everybody let their hair down and have a very good experience. Babies will be conceived, great music will be heard, couples will get engaged, people will carry on, hang out, sleep, wake up and carry on again.

As for the older adults in the community, most of whom will not be going, their job (as responsible taxpayers) will be to pay lots of overtime to the police and fire departments for traffic control, provide volunteer or paid labor, bring in the Port-a-Potties, and clean up afterwards. It's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it.

In other words, this will be one big wonderful party for the young, with the adults footing the tax bill. It reminds me of what parents do for their kids when their kids ask if they can have the whole class over to the house after the junior prom. It's a good thing. And somebody's got to do this. You cross your fingers.

This work will indeed provide an economic jolt for the depressed central part of Suffolk County to the west of Riverhead. Otherwise, I suspect the economic impact will be limited to inside the barbed wire.

As for all the money taken in, unlike other festivals and concerts in these parts, there will be no charity benefit, and very little if anything for all the government services provided for this party. The promoters, having worked hard, will walk away counting their money. This is America.

Most interesting of all, and perhaps most expensive of all, will be the impact this concert and the one before it will have on the usual ebb and flow of the second home owners from New York City that come out to the North Fork and the Hamptons on June 7 and 8 and on August 8, 9 and 10. As the Indians used to say, don't let your horses poop upstream if you want to use the water downstream. We have fifteen weekends in the summertime. The good Town Board of Riverhead has just approved two events that will seriously affect our second homeowners getting out to their homes for two of those weekends.

These events, if they were to be approved at all, should have taken place in May or September, before or after the summer season. There is no doubt that in June or August it will seriously impede the normal second homeowner decisions, the main economic engine of the East End, in a negative manner.

The promoters have gotten Riverhead's blessing but won't get their final health department permits until forty-eight hours prior to the beginning of the event. Safety and traffic have to be in place. And maybe they will. And maybe the traffic flow will all work out. One finds it difficult to imagine, however, the Suffolk County Health Department, if they perceive systems are not properly in place, deciding the concert cannot go ahead.

Cross your fingers.

Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company! of Riverhead presents an evening of new plays that examine war in different ways. Each piece is a work in progress.

THE guy who is ordered to press THE button responds in a very interesting way in "Peterson's War," by Dan Rattiner of East Hampton. Southampton playwright Esther Mott's monologue, "Morning," points out that wars are waged by men, fought by boys, feared by mothers. The writers will participate in the Sunday matinee discussion.

Opera of the Hamptons Returns To The North Fork

For the past eleven years, music lovers on Long Island have thrilled to the talents and virtuosity of the members of the Opera of the Hamptons. This year's summer productions on the North Fork should be no exception as Ann Marie and Marco Borghese will once again continue their wonderful patronage of the arts when they host two promising evenings of musical delight at their Castello di Borghese Vineyard in Cutchogue.

On Saturday June 14, the season will open with a dual program of Mascagni's 'Cavalleria Rusticana' a story of love, passion and revenge followed by a selection of Songs of Italy including gems by Tosti and some of the always popular Neapolitan songs.

Later in the summer, 'Opera to Broadway', always a firm favorite production here will be staged during the Long Island Wine Weekend on Saturday August 16th.

Both productions commence at 7pm and there can be few better ways of spending a summer evening than listening to wonderful music performed by some very talented professional singers, surrounded by the beauty of the vineyards and of course with the opportunity to taste some of the great Borghese wines before the show.

Many regular patrons will wonder why there is no scheduled production at Pindar Vineyards this year. Well, Dr. Dan Damianos, the owner of Pindar and another great patron of opera here on the North Fork has a problem with birds that love to reside in the Pindar Pavilion, normally the home of the opera production. The birds do not take kindly to being upstaged by an opera and do their best to outstage the performers. They also have been found to be an endangered species so evicting them is not practicable and Dr. Dan and his colleagues are currently investigating possible solutions that will allow the Pindar event to continue but until then the birds have won!

Tickets and further information can be obtained from the company at 631-728 8804.

Dan's North Fork Look Ma, No Gas!

Going "Green" In Style: The Mercedes Benz Of Electric Cars Comes To The East End

By Susan Whitney Simm

Drive down Route 58 in Riverhead these days and you might think the Jeep Eagle/Volvo dealer on the corner of Osborne Avenue has become a country club. Lined up out front, in true private golf club style, is a row of what appear at first glance to be the snazziest golf carts ever to grace a green.

"The first question people ask is, 'Are those golf carts?'" said Eagle Auto Mall owner Mark Calisi on a recent visit. "The answer, of course, is no." So what are they?

The latest innovation to hit the "green" market, the GEM – Global Electric Motors – motor vehicle is revolutionizing, if not how we get down the freeway, at least how we get around town, which is, in this case, gas-free.

GEMs run on batteries that can be recharged simply by plugging an extension cord (included) into an ordinary household outlet. They are silent, fumeless, and just downright cute. But despite the charming profile, they are serious transportation, not toys. Standard features include seatbelts, halogen headlights, safety glass windshield, rear- and side-view mirrors, horn, turn signals, side reflectors, even a heater/defroster. GEMs are open-air, like golf carts, but soft canvas doors are optional that zip up for travel in inclement weather.

Beautifully built and, in a nod to one of its parents, Mercedes (GEMs are built by Daimler Chrysler), smartly engineered, these vehicles are designed for on-road as well as off-road (or "turf" mode) use. Powered by sealed, no-maintenance batteries that actually IMPROVE with frequent charging, unlike annoying cell phone batteries, there is no oil to change, no filters to fuss with, no liquid levels to top off.

"All of our GEMs have sealed batteries," said Mark. "The recharging time, if you run the batteries all the way down to zero, is 6 hours. But you'd have to drive 30 miles at FULL SPEED (23 MPH) in order to drain them completely. Around here, short of driving to Patchogue and back, that is almost impossible."

Mark suggests that, after running errands around town and scooting back and forth to the beach a few times, just "unplug a lamp or your hairdryer" and recharge the vehicle for a few hours. "The more they're charged, the better they hold a charge," said Mark. "You'll find that, after the third or so charge, they'll be like little rockets!"

GEMs are also very affordable. Although the sticker price is $10,000, Eagle sells them for $3995 and $4995, for the 2- and 4-passenger versions, respectively. During April, the first month the dealership has offered them, over 14 have been registered. Mark even gave one to the Town of Riverhead, which Supervisor Kozakiewicz said will be "used by the police department for law enforcement."

"Could I get more money for them?" asked Mark. "Probably. But this is a small community, and I want to offer the vehicle to everyone at the same price."

Mark has owned Eagle Auto, the only dealer on the East End offering GEMs, for six years. He grew up in the business – his dad owned a dealership in Patchogue – and now owns a total of six dealerships.

"I had a choice of several dealerships that were for sale when I bought this one (referring to Eagle)," he said. "Someone told me about this place and I thought, well, I'll look at it, but in the back of my mind I thought, Riverhead is just not for me. Then I set foot in the place, spoke to a few people and fell in love with it. I watched the local clientele interact with the salespeople and the mechanics and I thought, THIS is where I want to be. And I was right." In fact, Mark recently purchased the Chevrolet dealer down the street (just west of Route 105) and in a short period of time, sales have quadrupled. "Customer satisfaction is everything to me."

And customer reaction so far to GEMs? "People are buying them to run errands, go to the marina, drive around senior complexes, drive to the beach or to the club. We've sold to several horse farms, and calls are coming in from area wineries. This is what people want. It's quality, affordable, ecological transportation. More people are more environmentally aware than I ever anticipated. Now, I certainly don't go around throwing papers on the ground, but I didn't realize how sensitive many people are to environmental concerns. This really impressed me. In fact, I now double check to make sure my recyclables are in order!"

But does the GEM represent, in your opinion, the transportation of the future in this area? I ask Mark. "This is the future of transportation in ALL areas. Around here, the application is easier because the roads are smaller and the top speed limit on back roads is 40 MPH. Eventually, though it will take years, the traditional gasoline engine will be replaced. That's all there is to it."

If you think the new VW Beetles are adorable, wait until you see the GEM. And as prices at the pump hit new all time highs, the timing couldn't be better.

I've seen the future, and it looks a lot like this...

Time Passages: The Watercolors Of Artist Bernard Springsteel

Bernard Springsteel came to the North Fork a year ago, discovered that it was the perfect inspiration for his artistic style, and never left. After graduating from Pratt Institute, Mr. Springsteel, who describes his life as "a series of art experiences," enjoyed a long and successful career as art director of numerous books and magazines before dedicating his talents full time to the pursuit of his personal vision.

"I am fascinated by the change that takes place, not only in humans, but in the buildings and objects with which man surrounds himself. There is a beauty in old age that I search for in my travels... It is the beauty of age and decay that just happens with time. I am there to capture it and use, for the most part, the composition in others."

Mr. Springsteel's watercolors will be on display at Castello di Borghese from May 16 through July 15. An opening reception is planned for May 16 from 6-8 p.m. at the winery in Cutchogue. Call 734-5111.

Asparagus Season

A sure sign of spring here on the North Fork is the appearance of handwritten signs advertising asparagus for sale. This is one of our earliest crops of the new season, along with rhubarb, with which it shares the distinction of being one of only two local perennial vegetables. (Yes, rhubarb is a vegetable.)

Asparagus, which is a member of the lily family, can trace its roots back to 200 B.C. The ancient Romans were the first to cultivate it and also the first to preserve it by freezing (the season was and still is sadly short). Romans froze fresh spears by transporting them via chariot to the snowline of the Alps where it was kept until the Feast of Epicurus, which wasn't held until six months later. Emperors actually deployed fleets of couriers to fetch the precious cargo and bring it back in time for the celebration.

In modern day Germany, restaurants celebrate the season with as many as 45 variations of this spring vegetable. Like most Europeans, the Germans prefer white asparagus, which is achieved by growing the stalks under mounds of earth (a process also known as "blanching") so the sun does not cause them to produce chlorophyll and so turn green.

Generally speaking, the less done to asparagus, the better. Steamed and rolled in a little sweet butter, the tender spears are perfection in a dish. But asparagus is an adaptable vegetable and well worth experimenting with. It goes especially well with citrus, such as lemon and orange, as well as with cheese and cream sauces.

Salt and pepper

Preparation

1. Grate 2 tsp. orange zest (colored part of peel); place in small bowl.

2. Squeeze juice. To orange zest, add butter, 1 Tbs. orange juice, cilantro, ginger and 1/4 tsp. each salt and pepper. With portable mixer, beat to blend.

3. Place on plastic wrap; roll up to form a 3-inch log, twisting ends. Freeze 30 minutes, or refrigerate overnight.

3. After butter mixture has set, cook asparagus: Peel bottom third of spears with vegetable peeler. In large, deep skillet, combine 2 cups water, remaining orange juice, 1/2 tsp salt and the asparagus; heat to boiling. Reduce heat; simmer, partially covered, 4 minutes or until tender. Drain; place on platter

4. Remove butter from freezer; unwrap. Slice into 1/4-inch rounds; place on hot asparagus. Serve at once.

Asparagus With Mornay Sauce

The North

- 1 Tb. all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup skim milk

Preparation

1. Snap off tough ends of asparagus. Remove scales with knife or vegetable peeler, if desired.

2. Cook asparagus in small amount of boiling water 6 to 8 minutes or until crisp-tender; drain and set aside.

3. Melt margarine in a medium size heavy saucepan over low heat; add flour, stirring with a wire whisk until smooth. Cook 1 minute, stirring constantly. Gradually add milk; cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until thickened and bubbly. Stir in Parmesan cheese, salt and pepper. Spoon sauce over asparagus.

Asparagus With Sour Cream

The Good Stuff

Every time I pick up a newspaper it is the same damn thing. The economy is in the toilet and there is a crazy virus running around killing everyone and causing people in China to wear masks that make them all look like train robbers. Even when good stuff happens, it somehow is twisted into something bad.

For some reason in the newspaper business, bad news is good news. All of the main newspaper's that I know of, for some reason, like to put the absolute worst thing that has happened in the world on the cover of the newspaper. In my opinion this makes no sense.

When people get up in the morning, one of the very first things that many of them do is pick up a newspaper to find out what is going on in the world. Many of us go to a deli or make ourselves some breakfast and sit down and glance at the cover of the newspaper.

Almost always, the headlines these days are depressing. Just the other day I was sitting down and reading about SARS. Words like "disastrous," "epidemic," and "death" fill the article. I found myself suffering from, as far as I can tell, some form of depression from this article. I have labeled this depression, "RAINS" or Reading Articles In Newspapers Syndrome. Even though these articles are depressing, I cannot stop myself from reading them because now I'm worried that if I don't read the article I could miss out on vital information. I can't help but think to myself that the editors of the newspapers should be required to put some sort of warning label before articles so little kids know not to read them.

I don't understand why we focus so much on the bad news. When things in your own life get you down, you go see a buddy and if your buddy has any sense of human nature he'll say, "Don't get so down about that little thing. There are so many other great things in your life to be happy about." The newspaper business needs to think more along these lines.

In response to this bad news, I have decided that I am going to combat "RAINS" by writing some good news for all of you folks out there who have been overexposed to all of this bad news.

The first thing that comes to mind is this girl Teresa Schirrippa, a senior at East Hampton High School, who is playing for a championship women's football team known as the New York Sharks. Teresa is a young, tough, 18-year-old, football-playing machine. She is fast, has good instincts and is holding her own on the football field playing against women that are much older and stronger. She is the youngest player on the team.

Teresa travels three days a week to Brooklyn for a grueling football practice. It is just like men's football. They wear the same protective gear, hit in the same manner, and the competition is just as fierce.

She does all of this while still managing to maintain a high GPA and play for East Hampton's track team.

The next thing that comes to mind is that the weather is getting nicer which means that summer is getting closer, which means that we will be able to soon go to the beach, play in the surf, towel off and go out for a cheeseburger. Spring is definitely one of the best times of the year. You get the birds chirping and you can still wear jeans and a light jacket and feel comfortable.

I think that it would be so unbelievably wonderful if The New York Times tomorrow had a giant picture of a family walking in Central Park on a spring day with a headline that says "Spring is Finally Here."

Let's not forget another great little tid-bit of news that we all can enjoy. Little League baseball is starting up soon. Man did I love Little League. I still love Little League. What is not to like about it? I'm kind of jealous of you people out there that can head out to a Little League game in Long Island. Not too many things can beat that.

I could go on and on about all of the good things that are going on right now. You sitting and reading this article is good news in my opinion. I don't get why newspapers don't write more stories about that.

When you think about it, there is more good news than bad news. Why so many of us are so intent on all of the bad stuff is beyond me.

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Now Hear This

In the "Top Ten List" of reasons that I hate working on Tuesday nights (the night that we close the paper), number six on the list would be because I missed this concert at the Talkhouse. Jesse Malin has turned out one of the best albums I've heard in a long time – an album that has been getting wide acclaim as one of the best of 2003 – but when he steps up to the stage at 8 p.m. on May 6, I'll be staring at a computer. For those who are out and about, this is definitely a show worth catching.

Since the demise of Malin's glam-punk band, D Generation, a few years back he has taken what many past fans would call a radical departure from his old ways. His album, The Fine Art of Self-Destruction is introspective, chronicling life in New York, highlighting Malin's songwriting skills and featuring his gritty-crooning voice. Ryan Adams produced the album in a five-day studio blitz and there is a rough edge to the music, but it serves the album well – and then it really grows on you.

I had the chance to speak with Jesse by phone last week. Halfway through his first tour in the States, he was in a Minnesota mall, looking for something to eat.

Dan's Papers: How'd you go from D Generation to Self-Destruction?

Malin: I had these songs that I'd been working on and then my landlord offered me a bunch of money to move out of my place in the East Village so he could raise the rent and I took the money and went into the studio.

DP: The album is fairly autobiographical; do you find it hard to write personal material?

Malin: Actually it's nice. Most of the time it's pretty easy to write personal stuff, but I sometimes find it hard to write when I'm happy.

DP: Do you have a favorite track on the album?

Malin: It's kind of day to day. One day it'll be "Wendy" and then another day it'll be "Riding on the Subway." As I play the songs each night I find something different in them all the time. And I like to throw some covers in when I play, too. Something from Springsteen, the Clash or Graham Parker. It just keeps it fun.

DP: Are you looking forward to playing in the Hamptons?

Malin: Yeah, I'm a Long Island boy so it'll be great. I've actually never been out there but it should be a really good time, and I'm looking forward to getting back to New York.

DP: What's the dumbest thing you've been asked in the past few weeks?

Malin: How do you feel being a country artist?

Jesse Malin appears at The Talkhouse in Amagansett on Tuesday, May 6 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10.

A SHOCK TO THE SYSTEM

Be sure! Be absolutely certain to be at Southampton College before 2 p.m. this Saturday, May 3 when the lights go down, because as Duke Hall's lights go out, so do the lights in Michael Caine's house, instigating the very dark comedy/drama, A Shock To The System – a gleefully shocking film of murder most titillating. Lively and deadly as sin, urbane Caine spreads his delicious, malicious malevolence over rich locations from the glitzy-greedy 1990's Wall Street area all the way out to sunny-foamy Montauk with some very comfortable homes of means in between.

Mr. Caine apparently likes "Movies Made Here."

He's worked his way out here in movies like Death Trap in East Hampton directed by Sidney Lumet and in Sag Harbor with Alan Alda's Sweet Liberty. For all we know, he might be working his particular kind of magic just past the college in Shinnecock Hills. Like a magician, he's able to change characterizations like the colors of silk handkerchiefs and pop up, amazingly, like a rabbit out of a hat. In A Shock To The System he appears as an ad exec teetering on the corporate ladder of success. His bills are as nagging as his wife (Swoozie Kurtz).

She expects his devoted talent to the company to get him a promotion. He knows he deserves it and will get it. He needs to be content at work. His home life: a house, a mortgage, a snippy wife and two yappy dogs is appalling. Take the scenario of the movie's opening.

It all began one night when the lights went out. Caine is in bed when his annoying wife switches on her big, expensive Stair-walker exercise machine. Bing-ho! The lights go out. They bicker-bicker. He cusses the machine. She complains that he should pay for a new wiring system. Blah! And Blast! He goes to the basement. To get to the fuse box he must get an ailing socketed light bulb lit. Grasping a pipe with one hand, he reaches the light socket and Ka-Pow! He's thrown by a shock – a powerful shock to the system. However, he's OK! The electric power might be out, but he is filled with a sense of real power. He survived. He's a gosh-darned sorcerer. A magician capable of extraordinary things. He can curse the darkness. ABRA-CADABRA ! SHAZA-

KAZAM! Bibbidi Bobbidy-BOO!

A wizard or not, he was still a power failure in his own home. And, though he has an attractive, young assistant (Elizabeth McGovern) drawn to him, he did not get the promotion. Infuriated, he leaves work early and while waiting for a subway train, he is accosted by a beggar. Put upon by the fellow he pushes him into an on-coming train. Hell breaks loose and, no one has noticed him. KALA-KAZOO KA-ZAM! That's simple.

Accidents can be fortuitous. So, when he has a business trip, he carefully shows Swoozie how to turn on the light to see the fuse box. Swish! Swoozie is gone in a flash. Hokus-Pokus! Bye bye, baby. Then, on his new yuppie boss's boat he notices a faulty gas stove. How simple. Especially with Elizabeth, the sorcerer's apprentice, as an alibi. ALA-KAZAM-KA-BOOM! He gets the job he should have gotten. He never needed a ladder. He is cleverly blasting his way to the top. That is, if the dog-gone, dogged detective loses the scent.

I'll only add that the amazing Caine has a lot of chicanery up his beautifully cuff-linked sleeves. I know, he has me, your host, Guy de Fraumeni, twisted around his little finger. Sarah Halsey is also a fan and, she'll be there to be sawed in half with pleasure. The refreshments, of course, are real and the seating deluxe. Bye bye, baby-BOOM!

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood 1n The Hamptons

You've heard about women who'd do anything for a good plate of spaghetti? Sure, they're pastatutes. (Bah-da-Bing!) Linguini aside, prostitutes are yet another subject that has been good for laughs. I use the word good with fear and trepidation for, as Mae West insisted, "Goodness has nothing to do with it." Or has it? So called "women of sin" have been pictured as having hearts of gold and for some, venerated as practitioners of the world's oldest profession. For all the hoop-la and entertaining uses that prostitutes have been put to for our amusement, in books and movies, I stress – none have done them any true, deep, insightful justice. That is, until Lilya 4-Ever, by the Swedish director, Lukas Moodysson. The others are, as the adage puts it, "As over-compliant as an inexperienced prostitute."

Lilya 4-Ever is Mr. Moodysson's third feature film. Bravely, it again is a social and politically motivated film. His 1998 Show Me Love projected the problematic life of a gay person in a small Swedish town. In 2000 he dealt with the disintegration of 1960's communal idealism with Together. Justifiably, he is considered Sweden's finest directorial prize since Ingmar Bergman. Mr. Moodysson, as writer and director, uses his cinematic sensibilities to express his compassion and rage. With intimate naturalism he exposes the tender-raw life of a very young Russian girl, Lilya, forced into prostitution by poverty in a system that Moodysson asserts has raped the poor, making them sell everything – including themselves. They are a party to their own rape. This is a truly evil act. Moodysson's film pushes you into the core of Lilya's violated body and mind. The tribulations of the 16-year-old's personal drama form much more than a case study of archetypal degradation. You are made to feel yourself inside her, wanting to help somehow, as you feel her pain. Even in Lilya's imaginary world of escape, her visions of angels, you are reminded that, in her fantasy, she is an innocent soul. She is just a child wearing the tortured body of a woman oppressed.

Lilya 4-Ever

Oksana Akinshina is Lilya. With unblinking humanity, as empathetic as Mr. Moodysson, she embodies the girl's sturdy fragility. In a wreckage of a city, (most likely Estonia where Russians are detested) Lilya prays to a calendar art angel holding a child. It's a warm image in a bleak life where teenagers can only litter an already squalid landscape. Lilya is at odds with her rough mother. She is at once happy when her mother tells her she's going to her boy friend in the United States, but her hopes sink when she's left behind. What is to come is succinctly and tragically foretold when Lilya runs to her mother's car for a last good bye, only to fall into a puddle of mud. It sits your nerves on the edge of the abyss you know lies ahead.

Lilya tumbles ahead in a free fall plunge into hell following her mother's abandonment. She had arranged for Lilya's aunt to come be with her. Sadly, the aunt is a horrid witch who takes over the place and sends Lilya away to a Rathole on her own. She soon finds that her mother will never send for her and, realizes that selling herself can get her through. A close friendship with a sweet boy, also cast into the streets, is a ruefully heart rending portion of the film. Take a firm grip on your emotions as a handsome young man asks her to leave for Sweden, with the hope of a redeemed life. She rushes into the proposal only to find that she's been lured into bondage. In Sweden, she is taken to an industrial town and locked in an apartment where men are brought for sex. I will not relate more, except to warn you of brutal, quite explicit sex as well as the many devastating scenes of piercing sadness.

Lilya 4-Ever never exploits, not even with sentiment. When Lilya dreams of the angelic little boy she left behind, he appears with wings. For me, the wings propose that for some, the only flight from pain is death.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

IS IT ART OR WHAT:

TV COVERAGE OF THE IRAQI WAR

That TV imagery is visual art (even if such images are still rather than moving) gives rise to an intriguing challenge: How "artful" was TV's recent coverage of the Iraqi War? An analysis in "Art Commentary" after September 11 suggested that still photographs in the newspapers conveyed a context and perspective that newscasts often missed: from impersonal images of destruction seen from afar to personal, close-up figures of people helping on the scene.

While TV coverage of another horrific event, the Iraqi War, exists in time and not merely space, an aesthetic interpretation seems appropriate. It's a reading, however, that serves different criteria.

For example, coverage assumed the structure of a fictional plot even though the events were non-fictional in nature.

Like the Persian Gulf War, the events played out like a Western film, with savagery and civilization engaged in a fight for supremacy. Thus, the Iraqi ruling regime became the "Indians": brutal, primitive and signifying a non-technical society, based in the past. America and Great Britain are the "Cowboys": rescuers who are civilized, technological and representing the future.

The TV coverage takes place, like a Western, against a desolate landscape with its broad expanse and insular communities. While Baghdad is an urban center, it is still presented as alienating and unknowable to the outsider, the Cowboys.

Like a Western, too, TV coverage established its plot points (as any narrative does): protagonists, antagonists, objective (to destroy Hussein and liberate the Iraqi people) and obstacles. One particularly relevant obstacle lent itself well to a Western plot – the rescue of Jessica Lynch. Or the saving of a white virgin from the evil Indians.

This rescue recalls one from the Persian Gulf War, which ended in failure: the search for Scotty Speicher who became a hero when he shot down one of the first Iraqi planes.

Certain cinematic devices empowered the coverage, although such techniques are not reserved for westerns alone. One was parallel action or (showing more than one event at the same time but not in the same place): split screens between correspondents in various cities is a good example,

And who can forget those dynamic compositions of American convoys sweeping through the desert, taken from all angles and perspectives. Now that's visual art.

HONORING THE ARTIST: AMY ZERNER

This week's cover by Amy Zerner is not only eye-catching and unusual, but it also exists on a myriad of levels. First, the work is actually fabric art, a unique piece from Ms. Zerner's clothing collection called "Spiritual Couture."

Secondly, its title, "Enchanted," signifies not only this particular work with its fantasy/myth-like motif, but represents the enchanted process with which it was made. ("Enchanted" derives from the Latin, meaning "to sing into," which is what happens when Ms. Zerner creates her works.)

Thirdly, enchanted has come to mean a philosophy by which Ms. Zerner and her husband, Monte Farber, live by. If the cover captures an unreal world's heightened state of awareness beyond what we can see and know, the idea of enchantment also makes it possible for Ms. Zerner to appreciate reality.

Ms. Zerner explains the concept a bit more succinctly.

"Enchanted means finding a balance, a balance between our right brain and left brain, where the right brain is more intuitive and the left brain is more logical. The right brain gives us the ability to see things at once; to understand organized chaos."

Even so, enchanted means something more to Ms. Zerner in the wake of the Iraqi War and September 11. As she puts it, "The creative process is an antidote to destruction. It's a healing method. Did you notice how a lot of people are knitting now, people who never did so in the past?"

Speaking of knitting, Ms. Zerner's wearable art is especially appropriate in this day and age. Her robes not only make people look good, but they are a constant reminder of a better world, her images providing a sanctuary from horrific events.

Ms. Zerner's art serves another purpose as well. Her mix of materials originates from diverse cultures, thus bringing a universal sense to her pieces. This process reinforces an important aesthetic tenet: content/message equals form/structure.

Ms. Zerner notes that people from different parts of the world can relate to her art, recalling that "a woman from Kuwait bought a robe because she was so drawn to its spirituality, even though she was from the Middle East."

We can imagine that Ms. Zerner can remember many similar stories, but she's a modest person, preferring to help people on many different levels, just like her art.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Zerner's wearable art will be featured in a window display at the "Pea in the Pod" maternity shop from May 5 -17. (As part of "When Fashion Meets Art".) Her robes are available at Southampton's Gayle Willson Gallery.

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Second Annual Southampton Summer Writers Conference

This July, writers from all over the country will flock to the East End for the second annual Southampton Summer Writers Conference, which – held at Long Island University's Southampton College – is quickly becoming one of the most prestigious writing conferences in the Northeast.

The ten-day event offers a continuous series of activities for participants, including readings, lectures and special events such as open-microphone night and comedy night. The primary work of the conference, however, will take place during the morning writing workshops. The workshops will allow conference participants to study in small groups with preeminent writers in their chosen genre.

"What is so exciting," notes Julie Farkas, who will be attending this summer's conference, "is having so many talented and well-respected writers teaching at one conference. Rarely if ever do you see such first-rate faculty."

From Frank McCourt, Pulitzer Prize winning author of Angela's Ashes and Tis, to Billy Collins, the 2001-2002 Poet Laureate of the United States, the faculty is by all accounts incredibly accomplished.

"Being able to work with [the faculty] is such a unique opportunity," Farkas says.

Among the list of options, workshop participants can choose to spend their time studying poetry, the novel, short stories, literary essay, memoir or playwriting.

Another interesting component of the conference is the daily craft lectures featuring not only the faculty, but also leading editors in the publishing world. Other social gatherings are sprinkled throughout the day, offering everything from author receptions to the conference softball game.

"And, of course," says Ines Seifert, assistant to the summer program coordinator, "one of the most exciting components of the conference is the evening events. Last summer, we had readings from John Guare and Kathleen Turner. This year will be great as well with such special events as an evening with Mel Brooks and Ann Bancroft." Other writers who are scheduled to speak include Margaret Atwood, Amy Tan, Walter Mosley and Bruce Jay Friedman.

While the May 1 application deadline is fast approaching, it is not too late to become part of the festivities. Seifert explains you can either go to the Web site and download an application or contact the program directly and they will send along a hard copy.

For those unable to attend the daily workshops and lectures, there is also the "subscription ticket," which will allow a ticket holder access to attend various evening events.

"I think it speaks very highly of the conference that so many of the faculty and writers are returning for a second year," Seifert says. And, in fact, returning faculty includes not only McCourt and Collins, but also the renowned Roger Rosenblatt, Bharati Mukherjee, and Clark Blaise. They are being joined this summer by Matt Klam, Melissa Bank, Jon Pintauro and Marie Howe among others.

"It promises to be a wonderful experience," Seifert says.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Tasty blackfish, also known as tautog or simply tog to New Englanders, is an underappreciated fish. In appearance it is dark with mottled coloring but has delicious, firm white flesh and suitable for many cooking techniques. While the average fish is about 3 pounds it can grow to about 25 pounds. I have grilled it whole in season, enjoyed it's meaty flesh in chowders and find it deliciously moist and tender when wrapped in foil and baked. Blackfish roughly comes into season when lilacs bloom around Mother's Day and the water temperature is just right for the rod and reelers.

Another wonderful fish with flesh similar to striped bass, Black Sea bass also comes into season at this time. It is a much smaller fish and a different species from blackfish. Usually no more than 10 or 11-inches Black Sea bass is much loved in Asian cookery. I enjoy simply steaming it whole with scallions and soy and a hot ginger oil finish or a black bean sauce. Black Sea bass are usually sold whole but the of course fishmonger will fillet it for you.

According to Jim Cornese of Cor-J Seafood in Hampton Bays the National Marine Fisheries in Woods Hole, Mass. regulate Black Sea bass. As a result they are protected at times in season when the government shuts them down for a time to curtail over fishing.

Black Sea bass is a personal favorite as its delicate white but mild flesh lends itself to absorbing flavors easily. Welcome the fresh varieties of these local fish from our own shores.

BLACKFISH IN A BAG STUFFED WITH HERBS

The firm flesh of blackfish lends itself to steaming with savory juices and fresh herbs in a foil envelope.

Serves 4

1 1/2 pounds blackfish fillets, skin removed

2 cloves garlic, finely minced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 teaspoon fennel seeds, crushed
1/3 cup chopped mix fresh herbs, parsley, basil, rosemary, sage Juice of 1 lemon
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Heavy duty aluminum foil

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

1. Have fishmonger remove the line of bones in the skinless fillets. Rinse fish and pat dry with paper towels.

2. Tear a piece of aluminum foil triple the size of the fish and fold in half. Place the fish in the center of the foil. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle over the crushed fennel seeds. Distribute the herbs evenly over the fish and squeeze the juice of lemon over all. Pour over the olive oil.

3. Pull the edges over the fish in three places, two sides and top, then fold edges over tightly. Transfer to a baking sheet and bake about 15 minutes. Let rest in the foil for a few minutes before serving. Serve with boiled potatoes if desired.

STEAMED SEA BASS CHINESE STYLE

This simple fish preparation is typically prepared in a Chinese home kitchen.

Serve 4

2 small sea bass, gutted, scaled, and cleaned with head and tail attached (butterflied)
2 - 3 scallions, rinsed, trimmed and thinly sliced
1- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/4 cup chicken or fish stock
1/4 cup vegetable or canola oil

1/2 inch piece fresh ginger, peeled and cut into fine julienne

1. Pour about 6 cups of water in bottom of a wok, place over high heat and bring to a boil. Dip fish into boiling water for several seconds, lift out and transfer immediately to a heatproof gratin dish. Scatter the scallions over the fish and pour over the soy and stock.

2. Pour off enough water in wok leaving about 2 inches in the bottom. Insert rack in wok and put the heatproof dish on it. Cover and bring the water underneath back to a boil, adjust heat to keep water at a brisk simmer and steam for 7-10 minutes depending on size of fish.

3. Meanwhile, place oil and ginger in a small saucepan and heat until a haze appears on surface of oil. Oil should be hot but do not allow to smoke or boil.

4. When fish is done remove plate from wok. Pour hot ginger oil over fish and serve at once.

Montauk adds a burst of culinary flavor with Gianni's Bar & Grill. Featuring a casual, Italian-influenced menu (pastas, pizzas, salads, local seafood and steak) at prices that won't break the bank. Gianni's is located at the site of the former Caswells restaurant, owned by John and Kathy Yashinowsky. After several years of operating the eatery as Caswells, the Yashinowskys decided to rethink their original concept – reflecting the growing demand for quality, reasonably priced fare. Entrees range in price from $12.50 to $24 and include: spinach ravioli Parmesan; scallop linguine with spinach and bacon; cornmeal crusted local fluke with creamy polenta; and a pan-roasted Montauk lobster with basil and garlic dipping butter. For meat lovers, a grilled center cut pork chop and N.Y. sirloin pepper steak is also on the menu. Gianni's Bar & Grill will serve dinner from 5 to 10 PM, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and will expand those hours as the season dictates. For more information, call Gianni's Bar & Grill at (631) 668-0303.

Dining In The Hamptons

What Color Was Coke Originally? (And Other Fun Facts)

"If you are ever at a loss to support a flagging conversation, introduce the subject of eating." So said Leigh Hunt, an early nineteenth century English journalist and very wise man. He was right, after all – what's more fun than talking about food, except eating it?

For the hopeless romantic:

Charles Alderton, a Texan pharmacist, created a soft drink and named it in honor of his prospective father-in-law, Dr. Charles Kenneth Pepper. Though you'd expect major kiss-up points for that one, the doctor was unimpressed. So Alderton decided to drop the period after the abbreviation and made a fortune on "Dr Pepper."

For the history buff:

In centuries past, bread was divided by status: workers got the charred bottom of the loaf, the family ate the middle, and guests received the top, or "upper crust."

For the mathematician:

An ear of corn never has an odd number of rows.

For the health conscious:

You consume .007 calories whenever you lick a stamp.

For the exercise obsessed:

You expend more calories than you ingest when eating a stalk of celery.

For the observant:

Why have you never seen a cashew nut still in its shell? The shells and skins of cashews contain an extremely caustic oil that can blister the skin severely. The dangerous oil must be removed completely before the nut can be touched or eaten.

For the student looking for an easy-science project:

A hard-boiled egg spins but both a raw egg and a soft-cooked egg will not. Discuss.

For the chocoholic:

Cocoa butter, the foundation ingredient in all chocolate products, should really be called "cacao butter." The butter comes from cacao beans – not cocoa beans – which are, by the way, really seeds.

For those with strong stomachs:

The pool of red liquid that gathers beneath your rare steak is not blood. Most, if not all, of the blood is drained back at the slaughterhouse. Instead, an oxygen-carrying protein called myoglobin gives meat its red color. When myoglobin is cooked, it turns brown.

For the smarty-pants cook:

No, adding salt to your pasta water does not significantly raise the temperature. A tablespoon of table salt added to five quarts of boiling water for one pound of pasta will only shorten the cooking time by half a second or so. Salt is purely for taste. Buen provecho!

For the messy fish-gutter:

You are to blame for your fishy-smelling fish. Rough handling of fish can cause the enzymes to escape from the guts, which quickly start to decompose the flesh. Since fish often eat other fish – such docile creatures – their digestive enzymes must be that powerful.

For mothers who told us that soda would rot our teeth:

If you put a T-bone steak in a bowl of Coke, it will be gone in two days. (By the way, the original color of Coke was green.)

For the cost conscious:

American Airlines saved $40,000 in 1987 by eliminating one olive from each salad served in first class.

For food fact nuts:

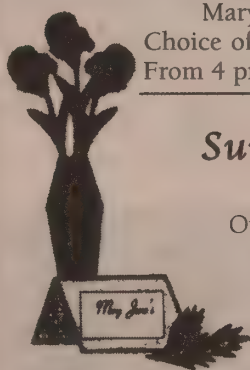

According to the National Peanut Board (yes, there is such an entity), 96 percent of people who make PB&J sandwiches put the peanut butter on before the jelly. Also, most women and children prefer creamy style, while most men choose crunchy. Furthermore, East Coast residents prefer creamy (three cheers for creamy!) while most West Coast dwellers opt for crunchy. And for those of you who won't touch the gooey stuff, you may be an arachibutyrophobe – a person who is afraid of getting peanut butter stuck to the roof of his or her mouth. –Nicole Cotroneo

In a phrase, sharp edges have given way to softer curves. It seems a more mature sense of self has taken hold at Pierre's – the Bridgehampton bistro has found its stride.

Pierre's was trying to find its niche when it opened last summer. All of the elements were there: the menu offered an impressive array of creative dishes, the bar was lively and well-attended, the décor was Hamptons chic and the young and wealthy beat a path to the door. It possessed all the hallmarks of a hotspot – but there was a cohesion lacking that separates the East End hotspots from the East End establishment. And the Hamptons see a dozen new hotspots every summer, but only one or two have staying power – Pierre's may have separated itself from the pack. This is not the same restaurant it was six months ago.

Stepping inside last week, the change was noticeable immediately. The staff was comfortable, there were no moments of indecision; the atmosphere was more sophisticated in the truest sense of the word. Whereas the "scene" was king last summer, the scene has acquiesced and the food and atmosphere have come to rule this season. Pierre explained that the restaurant's new mantra is "You are in the Hamptons, relax and enjoy."

The meal began with a quick perusal of the wine list that features a number of wines from

Pierre's

2468 Main Street., Bridgehampton
631-537-5110

Long Island, France and California. Selecting a Maron Chardonnay, attention was then devoted to the menu. Pierre's has a new chef this season, Thomas O'Reilly, and he has crafted a menu that is bistro inclined and well balanced. There is a cohesion to the offerings that he has selected that was missing last year, and he executed each dish we tried fantastically.

We began the meal with a couple of salads and the Louisiana crabcake on a lobster and red pepper bisque with baby lettuce. The only fault I could find with this dish was the size – it was too small. Other than this minor oversight the crabcake was a superb balance of stuffing and crab. One of my guests for the meal – a self-described crabcake connoisseur – gave the dish high marks. The salads, a red and white Belgian endive with goat cheese, smoked bacon and hazelnut crumble was remarkable and the mesclun salad with green apple, gorgonzola and walnuts was lauded for its freshness, which the crab connoisseur deemed "August fresh."

We happened to sit down for our meal just a week before the summer menu made its debut. There are quite a few holdovers from the Spring fare, though the update reflects the warmer weather to come. A lobster salad bruschetta looks to be a good bet, the steamed blue mussels with coriander will absolutely complement a nice Chardonnay on a warm night and the Plateau de Fruits de Mer (oysters, shrimp, clams, snow crab and langoustine) should be very popular.

Selecting entrees proved to be a daunting task; with a range of pasta, fish and meat dishes every palate is sure to find something of appeal. We opted to try the penne "a la Grecque" with grilled shrimp, spinach, pine nuts and an Ouzo-lemon-feta cream sauce, which was absolutely fantastic. The sautéed duck breast a l'orange with mapled wild rice was succulent and supremely tender. And Chef O'Reilly's aptitude with the first two entrees was exceeded only by the sea bass with parmesan crust and roast garlic potato puree that was truly memorable.

Some of the entrees from the summer menu that will have to be sampled in the coming months are the black pepper fettucine with fresh lobster, basil and tomato, the pan seared monkfish on ratatouille sauce with tapenade and haricots verts and the hangar steak with shallots and red wine. The summer menu is quite extensive and there are a number of dishes that should be lovely for a relaxed meal with friends.

Desserts are always a challenge at the end of the meal – never enough room and too many tasty options. Opting to stay with some of the simpler selections we enjoyed a tart tartine (with the ice cream on the side), the mixed berries and a couple of sorbets that were notable for their creaminess and the coconut was exceptional.

Pierre's has definitely come into its own in the past few months and this summer should find the restaurant with a good buzz among the restaurant crowd and a loyal following. Chef O'Reilly's dishes were incredible and matched with reasonable prices Pierre's will undoubtedly be a popular spot this summer.

Gettin' In The Garden With Mom

Every Mothers Day, I love to go and pick up some new clay pots and great new plants for my mother. In her book, a pot would contain some pansies or impatience for the summer. I try to come up with great trailing plants to go down her front steps and some striking color combinations. When I went there for Easter, I saw she took in a planter I had made up for her last year, still with the Dracena spike going strong in it. Everything else was gone. She is going to have a fit when I have to empty it and shake that dirt clean. But that is something that ensures a great flourishing pot. Making sure you replace all the dirt with fresh clean dirt. Even scrubbing the pot with a little detergent and water (I add some Listerine to the water also) will give it a good start.

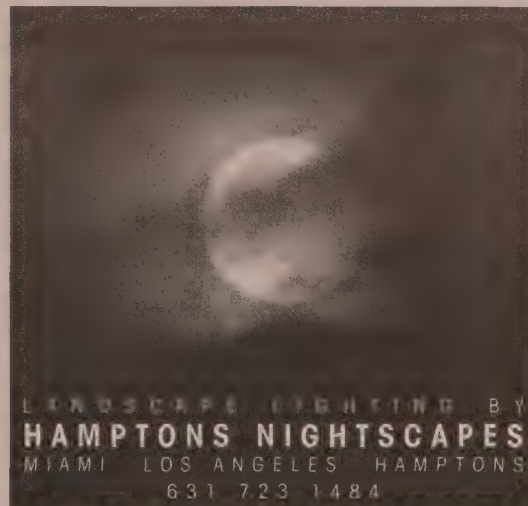

Miracle Gro has some nice potting soil in bags that contains their fertilizers. A great way to get those babies off to a good start. It doesn't clump or weigh itself down when it gets wet like some of those other bargain brands do. It is worth the extra change to invest in some good potting soil.

Annual plants are the plants that go through an entire life cycle, germinate, grow, flower, produce their seeds and die, all in one growing season. Usually they reach the point of flower production within 6-8 weeks after sprouting and continue to bloom till frost. Perennials that would not survive a severe winter are used as annuals for seasonal color as well. Soil and light are two important factors in container plants... then of course sufficient watering and regular feeding. Grouping them together conserves humidity which they all seem to love during the hot summer months. Color, form, texture and scale are also very important in displaying your plants to their fullest. We usually think only of color - will the pale pink impatience go with the purple petunias or would a darker pink be better? Color is an important factor, but plants usually have much more to offer. They may have both colorful blooms and foliage of an unusual texture or color: bold-leaved geraniums and nasturtiums: heart-shaped morning glory and moon vine foliage: purple-red cockscomb leaves: feathery cosmos and baby's breath. Or they may grown primarily for their foliage. Outstanding examples of this would be silvery gray dusty miller, rich purple basil and perilla and the myriad colors of coleus. Finally, there are the annuals treasured for their seedpods, such as decorative peppers, ornamental eggplants and purple beaned dolichos. A search of your favorite garden center will turn up most of these plants. Experiment with different plants, in your containers, perhaps with some plants you would only consider for your garden beds. Place your tall ones in the center of your pots for all around appeal. Or if up against a porch wall try placing them at the back. A pot with Baby's Breath looks stunning in front of several higher pots of marigolds, making it look airy and like a floating mist. Think texture and you will come up with a variety of different looks for different areas of your outdoor rooms. Remember to choose your pots with the end result in mind. Plant roots need plenty of room to grow as well, make sure you seat them on some pebbles or other medium so that they are not seated on the hot pavement. Don't place them directly on concrete, not only with they suffer root damage, you will get some really permanent stains on it.

Keep those hands dirty!

Pruning And Swooning

It seemed like the gardening season would never get underway this year. But with the forsythia buses and daffodils blooming, I think we can safely say spring is here. Since the forsythia is in bloom, pre-emergent weed controls can be applied to the lawns and shrub beds. Pre-emergences applied now can greatly reduce the amount of time spent on weeding later on in the season. Most of the pre-emergent controls are chemical based, but there is an organic control made from corn gluten also available. Just remember you can't use these products anywhere new seed has been sown or will be planted in the next 8 weeks.

Spring is a good time try growing grass under trees, provided that it isn't dense shade. In the spring before the tree leaves have grown there will be more available light. But trying to grow grass under mature trees such as evergreens, maples and oaks is futile and a waste of resources. The lack of sufficient sunlight and the tree's strong root system are an unfriendly environment for growing grass. Selected removal of the tree limbs will help to provide more sunlight to the grass. Eventually growing grass under the tree will become impossible.

I had thought at one time that adding a layer of soil in order to cover the tree roots and grow flowers was a good idea. But what happened was that the change in the grade area of the mature tree ended up sending it into a gradual decline, eventually killing it.

Spreading a 2-3 inch layer of mulch over the area will keep mud down if it is a pathway. Containers of shade loving annuals and a garden bench or pottery of some sort can be a pretty alternative. The bright side is, you won't need to mow there anymore!

If you haven't done so already, rake back winter mulches and leaves from around the perennials, rose bushes, and spring bulbs. The perennials that bloom in the summer and fall can be divided now if they are over-crowded. The perennial bed can be fertilized with 5-10-5 at a rate of 2-3 lbs. per 100 ft. If you choose to use the fertilizer Milorganite, you will get an added bonus of small critter repellent. It needs to be applied repeatedly throughout the season if used in this manner.

April is the month to prune many varieties of the flowering vine clematis. This popular vine blooms profusely during the summer months, especially if it's been pruned properly. The vines can be pruned back to within 36 inches of the soil or to a strong bud. Another plant that responds well to pruning at this time is the hydrangea. The big leaf or mop head hydrangea is best pruned after they leaf out in the spring.

With the pattern of cool damp weather we have had recently, it is important to think about the probability of fungal leaf diseases on some trees or shrubs. Fungal spores are released during cool damp conditions in the spring. Fungicides can be applied as the new leaves start growing. They should be sprayed when there are 2-3 days of dry weather forecasted for optimal results. Follow the directions suggested on the label closely. These sprays usually need to be re-applied at 10- and 20-day intervals for the prevention of disease.

Happy Planting And Gardening!

At Home, The Emphasis Is On Fashion

What have you been shopping for lately in respect to your home? New home trends mirror styles and patterns found in top fashion design and you can give your home a new, friendly, fresh, funky look. Never before has fashion had such a dramatic impact on home décor. Top runway designs, colors and textures are being translated into the home fashion marketplace on every level. From the predominance of stripes, to color palettes of bright citrus and soothing avocado, (remember that shade in the sixties?), to the nubby texture of bamboo. Fashion and home style have merged into a singular statement.

"The influence of fashion on home décor is stronger than ever," explains T.J. Maxx spokesperson Laura McDowell. "We are seeing runway looks modified for home décor. Take for example the rich look of bamboo. Bamboo is used on the handles of canvas totes as well as in the base of decorative lamps. This carryover of shared trends will continue as the line blurs between clothing and home fashions."

Some of the best trends on the horizon – for home and fashion include the bold bursts of citrus. The vivid citrus color palette is a must-have for spring and summer. On the home entertaining front, brighten an outdoor party with lemon yellow glassware, tangerine martini glasses, and a hand-painted glass pitcher. Add flair to the room with citrus inspired décor such as an orange ceramic jug. (Perfect for flowers or umbrellas) or a yellow frosted lantern.

Color in full bloom...Beautiful flower blossoms are the true essence of summer. The pretty, colorful designs are surpassingly fresh and modern. Blossoms are everywhere – look for them in vases, hanging wall art, picture frames decorative plates and novelty boxes. For the fashion minded, don't forget a pink chapeau, strappy sandals or jewelry inspired by floral motif.

Soothing Avocado...I remember this color well. I grew up with the Avocado refrigerator, stove, counter tops, bathroom fixtures, you name it in the sixties

Smile, You're On Candid Camera

With today's population focused on white teeth, the whiter, the better, teeth there are new directions in tooth whitening and dental care. I did a little research on a brand-new tooth paste product, bought, tried and love it...

Launched in 1990 and imported from Italy, BlanX is recognized throughout Europe by the discriminating consumer. Sold in leading pharmacies, boutiques and up-scale department stores; it is Europe's best selling tooth whitener and is the number one choice of international dentists

More than a tooth whitener...BlanX has created a new esthetic trend in tooth whitening and dental care and acts as a preventive and cosmetic factor, naturally controlling the bacterial flora of the oral cavity. It also improves the optimal dental esthetics because it does not abrade teeth but makes enamel more resistant, compact and white. By just applying a pearl-size amount to your toothbrush and based upon twice daily.

Iceland moss – BlanX toothpaste's unique ingredient is the oldest and purest form of plant life know to man. Its biological properties have been recognized since the late Middle Ages, when it was used as a remedy for tuberculosis and pneumonia. But it wasn't until the 1950s that scientists discovered that moss derivatives set up a barrier against bacterial colonization.

This toothpaste has created a new esthetic trend in tooth whitening and dental care and is the only toothpaste to act with a natural bacteriostatic function to easily remove dental plaque, while providing ionic equilibrium to strengthen tooth enamel. BlanX is the result of studies performed by an international team of researchers from the United States, Switzerland, Japan, Italy and Russia. And both the World Health Organization and the Italian Dental Association have documented BlanX toothpaste to be a non-abrasive natural tooth whitener with significant anti-bacterial and antiviral properties. It offers enhanced quality, performance and luxury...meeting the demands of those consumers who want to maintain healthy teeth and gums while achieving whiter teeth.

What causes teeth discoloration?

Just as everyone has a different complexion, each individual has a characteristic enamel color, which may even vary from tooth to tooth...and discolor from external or metabolic factors such as drugs, smoking, food, illness, plaque and tartar, or aging.

Iceland moss – BlanX's unique ingredient, is the oldest and purest form of plant-life known to man. Its biological properties have been recognized since the late Middle Ages, when it was used as a remedy for tuberculosis and pneumonia. The Iceland moss extract in BlanX adheres to bacterial residues on stains and other environmental pollutants. This results in a progressive elimination of the residues and restores teeth to their original whiteness. And unlike most whitening toothpaste's, BlanX has been formulated with a calibrated mixture of high-quality silica that "... does not abrade teeth, but makes enamel more resistant, compact and white." – from the research of the World Health Organization

You can measure the whiteness of your teeth with the Blanxometer, a simple too included in every box of toothpaste. BlanX retails for a 4.3 oz. push button canister is $17 and can be purchased locally at the Sag Harbor Pharmacy on Main Street and Whites Pharmacy in East Hampton. Hey, I think I'm worth it, aren't you?

Police Blotter

An East Hampton Police Officer responded to an Sayres Path residence in Wainscott on Thursday to assist two Suffolk County Probation officers who had their hands full with a "client." The officer arrived to find numerous legal and parole violations in the man's bedroom, including a large bag containing 4.2 ounces of marijuana, a digital scale and other assorted drug paraphernalia. The subject, a 20-year-old Wainscott man, was arrested for criminal possession of marijuana in the fourth degree.

East Hampton cops nabbed a few other pot heads this past week on a dirt road off Springy Banks Road in East Hampton. The officer was patrolling the town park area when he saw a car parked with three youths inside. He approached them to see what they were up to and smelled marijuana emanating from their car. He called for assistance from another officer in the area and began, one-by-one, to search the subjects and the car. All three were arrested on counts of unlawful possession of marijuana after the officers found numerous bags of marijuana, both on their persons and in the car, and a glass pipe containing marijuana residue. One was released when he made bail, the others were held overnight awaiting their arraignment.

Well, there's one person in East Hampton that will definitely be keeping off the grass this week. A Woodbine Drive resident called police last Saturday when she realized that someone had stolen her $400 ride-on lawn mower from her shed. Police checked the area and the neighborhood, but found nothing.

An employee of the Wainscott Hess station had some problems with drug-fiends this past weekend. She called the cops after an unidentified gentleman came in and tried to run out with a Budweiser 18-pac. She told police that when she yelled, he dropped the beer and ran off. According to her description, the attempted burglar was about 20-years-old, 5'8" in height and wearing a dark sweat-shirt.

Another business in Montauk was the victim of alcohol blundering idiots this week. The security manager at the Montauk Yacht Club called police after he discovered $200 worth of beer and liquor missing from the bar Sunday night. He new there was a wedding party at the facility that night who were using the bar. Upon investigating the nearby reception room, he found several people (members of the party) consuming alcohol and he asked them to leave. The security manager decided not to press charges but wanted the incident on record.

Dan's Letters

GAME TIME

Dear Dan,

A friend just emailed me your story about the Knicks game a few weeks ago. You really wrote a wonderful piece, and I was glad to read that you had such a good time and enjoyed the seats so much. But the thing that made me happiest: that the Knicks prevailed 66-63 in your last backyard game!

Thanks, and it was very nice meeting both of you. I get out the Hamptons every once in awhile, maybe we'll run into each other this summer.

THE EEL THAT WOULD NOT GO AWAY

Dear Dan,

There have been a few articles so far in Dan's Papers about this very large eel. In the one that deals with the judge refusing passage through Manhattan, what ever happened to the 41-foot eel left in the railroad car? What is being done about the current situation? Thank you.

Tammy
Via email

He wriggled away. —D.R.

THE APPEAL OF ALDA

Dear Dan,

In your write-up of the Alda event: Chuck Hitchcock and I are friends of long-standing and have much in common, but we are rarely mistaken for one another. He's the good-looking guy with the big smile; I'm the other guy with the gray hair.

For the Alda event, I had the privilege of bringing Alan on stage and making the opening and closing comments. His entrance was not to "light applause," but to a very enthusiastic welcome from the packed house. But the real measure in any appearance is the applause at the end, and it was sensational.

Alan Alda is a natural teacher, with an easy but provocative style that fully engages his students and causes them to think in fresh and creative ways about their work and about dramatic writing in general.

We were thrilled to have him on campus and I am hoping we may have him back again. As you may know, he and Arlene Alda will receive honorary degrees from the College at commencement on May 18th.

Along these lines, I am pleased to report that Alec Baldwin, who I brought to the campus for last Spring's Honors Lecture, is returning this summer for his second Master Class in Theater. After last summer's highly successful class, applications have doubled and are coming to us from all over the country (with a few from overseas). East End actors interested in the class should apply now.

Hope all is well as finally we begin to see the spring.

Jim Larocca
Via email

I apologize for mis-identifying Jim Larocca. —D.R.

A CAR-TENTIOUS CRITIQUE

Dear Dan,

I am a car nut; I enjoy editorials about cars.

Last week, Bob Gelber discussed how great the Buick TV commercials are. Anyone under the age of fifty has no idea what they are about; thank goodness they dropped the ads with Tiger Woods and Harley Earl. Portholes on the '04 Buick's will not make a dent in the auto industry.

Regarding his comments on the 2003 Honda Accord, "It is a rather attractive car, with a European flair" The '03 Honda Accord is as boring as the past 4 generations, vanilla, simple but reliable cars. The design leaders in Europe are VW Group, BMW, and Peugeot. None have anything that remotely looks like the Accord, it looks Japanese like all other Honda products.

To say the Porsche Cyan resembles the BMW X5 would be the same as saying Long Beach in Noyac/Sag Harbor is similar to Long Beach in Queens.

Lastly, he describes the BMW 7 series as "beauty impaired." Obviously he has never seen a BMW 3.0 or Bavaria. The headlight treatment and the tail treatment harken back to those models. The BMW 7 series has also been chosen as an automobile magazine 10 best, the equivalent for another auto publication by both editors and readers choice. Lastly and most importantly, in a year that luxury vehicle sales were weak, the new 7 enjoyed a 14% increase in sales.

Retro is in thus the Mini and the 7. Obviously he is too enamored with Harley Earl to notice.

Unsigned
Via email

I second all of the above. —D.R.

EEL: IT'S WHAT'S FOR DINNER

Dear Dan,

Now I have seen everything! My family and I stopped at Giordano's Restaurant in Noyac on our way to our weekend house in Sag Harbor. I couldn't believe my eyes. On the special menu board as you enter the restaurant is their newest dish, "Ecuadorian Eel."

Tell me, now that they have been catching those Ecuadorian Eels in that Trout Pond are they selling them to the restaurants?

I didn't dare ask the owner where he got the eel. We sat quietly during dinner wondering if this story is really real. Will this eel be the new hip dish of the Hamptons?

Roger Winthrop
Sag Harbor
Via email.

Try the eel fricassée. —D.R.

and seventies, and it came in avocado. Yikes! It's back! Avocado, paired with sand and stone, can be soothing yet stylish. In a hectic world, these spa-inspired colors are most welcome. Bring a sense of tranquility to any room with aromatherapy, a soft chenille throw, or scented soaps and candles.

Stripes galore! Stripes are everywhere. From home accent pieces such as pillows, throws, and placemats, so fashion accents including blouses, handbags and sandals. Just a few bold stripes will highlight any room — or accentuate any outfit. Stripes can even become a signature style when using striped note cards to say thanks.

Jungles inspired accents continue to be strong in home design. The animal prints found on throw rugs, picture frames and fabrics now have a new twist: bamboo. A highly texture wood, bamboo infuses a tropical feel to any room. From lamps, trays, magazine racks, and storage boxes, bamboo is indeed everywhere in the home. It is also a staple in the fashion world as the season's most popular totes feature bamboo handles and toggles.

I shop and shop and shop and always wind up in the home furnishings department at T.J. Maxx in Bridgehampton and Riverhead. T.J. Maxx's extensive home department provides a wide variety of many fashion inspired accent pieces which are perfect for any home, occasion, gift or season. And...I usually run into all my friends there!
